"50 in 50" and Embracing the Sun

The idea of my challenge was borne in June 2011. I met a fellow camper/runner at the Colworth Marathon Challenge running event - 3 races, 3 days, 26.2 miles. The runner was extremely pleased to be there as he was able to bag 3 races in one weekend for what he called his "50 in 50 challenge" - 50 running events in his 50th year. Inspired, I decided to celebrate this landmark age by doing 50 half marathons as a 50 year old - my own version of the "50 in 50" and planned to start the challenge right after I ran a marathon on my 50th birthday! Two challenges? Well the last one, I have been dreaming about for a few years, in fact, ever since I did the New York Marathon back in 2006 where I met a fellow lady runner staying in the same hotel as me. She was ecstatic the whole weekend as she was running the New York marathon on her actual 50th birthday. So I already had a running challenge planned for the big 5-0 and I wasn't about to drop it just because I came up with another good way to celebrate my birthday...

Why half marathons? The half marathon had become my favorite running distance. As a fun runner, it was a challenge every time to get a sub-2 hour finish time - doable on a good day and such fun!

What I didn't know, in those happy times when I declared my 2 challenges every now and then to family, friends and fellow runners, was that at 50, both of them would prove to be more of a challenge than I ever expected them to be....

No challenge is easy - and I soon learned that challenges can, in a moment, be completely beyond you due to events not in your control. All your dreams are completely lost. This is what happened to me four months before race day in mid-December. A ruptured appendix, resulting in peritonitis and pneumonia, and then a twisted knee were setbacks that almost stopped the launch of my challenge - a marathon on the day of my 50th birthday - the Manchester Marathon on April 28, 2013. From then on the clock ticked as I ran 53 half marathons within 365 days before my next birthday.

Reaching the Sun, my 52nd Half Marathon was special- hence my medal photo to celebrate at the Northampton Half Marathon held in the ancient grounds of Delapre Abbey in April 2014. I was happy to display all the medals received by the events I ran as a 50 year old. I have dedicated all my runs in memory of my late Father who died unexpectedly only 2 months before my own illness and also in celebration of my best friend Fiona - the bravest person I know who has successfully fought off cancer twice.

I would like to thank my family, especially my Mother, who never missed a visit whilst I was in hospital. I had lost 14 pounds in 10 days. She fattened me up and encouraged me, despite her own deep grief at the time, and was tremendously strong in returning every day to the very place where my Father had recently passed away; all my friends and fellow runners who never let me give up on my running dreams, which includes the friend that sent me the link to Half Fanatics; and a BIG thank you to all my US Half Fanatic friends without whom I would have never completed my 50 in 50 or reached the Sun!
