Featured Fanatic

Kari Albrecht, #15568

Tell me a little bit about your path to the Fanatic Asylum. I'd have to say that I had heard of the Fanatic's before, but I thought I had to sign up first and then work on qualifying. Last year I was in Tulsa with my friend for a race and I talked to someone at the Fanatics table and realized I had qualified last year and it still counted, so I signed up when I got home!

What / Who inspires you to lace up your shoes and run? I'd have to say that there isn't any one particular person that inspires me. I find inspiration all around me every day. From my husband running with me, my neighbor who has coached me and been one of my best friends (she ran in college and is now just a mom enjoying the run), the pacer who pushed me to that unofficial sub-2 and dressed like a girl sometimes, my IRUN4 buddy Katie, my daughters, my type 1 diabetic friend, the wheelchair runner I met in Tulsa, to my other good friend Heather that is more beautiful than she knows and finishes every run she starts with grace and beauty even if she doesn't see it (I do). These are the people that inspire me, give me hope, and show me how kind people still are.

How has running changed for you since being diagnosed with MS? When I was diagnosed it was a shock! I thought people with MS were in wheelchairs and I was a runner, so how could this be? I have since learned how untrue that is. I strive to show people how that misconception is out there. I've even had people assume I'm contagious and I say "For God's sake it's not Leprosy!" So I'd have to say that my diagnosis has been more of a motivator than anything. It causes me to push myself even more. Somewhere in me is the fear that if I stop moving there is a wheelchair waiting for me, even if my doctor says that's not likely, I'm not about to let that happen.

Tell me about your most memorable race. I have had so many memorable experiences that I have a hard time picking just one, but it probably would have to be my 2nd marathon finish line. It was Joplin's Memorial Marathon, a run I participate in every year back in my hometown for the tornado victims. It was the first time my Dad was at one of my races, and my husband ran the last 2 miles with me and reassured me that everyone was there. My daughters were there and honestly having my Dad there was more meaningful than he knows.

What are your goals for 2017 and beyond? I don't have a specific goal for 2017, but my husband and I have decided to run a half in every state. We will be starting that journey in 2017, after I finish out 2016 with 1000 miles for the very 1st time! I may not have as many half marathons under my belt as some Fanatics, but I run with just as much heart as everyone else does. And I promise you I will be one runner cheering for you just as much as you would cheer for me. I have found home in the running community, more than I ever dreamed. My feet have taken me to places I'd never have been and introduced me to some of the most amazing people.
