Featured Fanatic

Melissa Thigpen, Half Fanatic #9945

I've only been running for 6 months and 2 days, but on March 22nd, 2015, I completed my first full marathon!

How it All Started... My husband did the Bataan Death March Full Marathon twice with soldiers in his unit (in 2006 and 2007) and I thought it was such a neat thing. When I became a runner, and was reminded of this full once registration opened, I said, I want to do it! I want to experience this full, if never another. Time is not promised to any of us, so I said, "2015 will be my year and this is the full I will do".

Down But Not Out... I started training in January, by slowly increasing my miles each weekend, but on February 8th, during a 17-miler, I somehow hurt myself on mile 15. My knee buckled then locked up. I was in intense pain. It was so bad that I went to the ER. I was recommended to rest it and take time off from running for at least a week. I took some time off then went in for a follow-up still having pain a week later. I was taken for X-rays, as well as an MRI. I waited patiently for the results, but time passed and I heard nothing. I continued to do my races I was booked for. I just listened to my body and took it slow when needed to. My pace wasn't the same, nor was the miles I was able to run. Aside from my few weekend races, my marathon training had come to a stop. The time had come and it was the weekend of my very first marathon. I was so excited. I was nervous about my knee, but with such a long time limit allotted to the participants, I was confident I could finish. Because I was injured, my goal was not a specific time, but to just complete it.

Race Day... My first full marathon was amazing! I carried Old Glory (the American flag) the entire 26.2 miles. I felt a little pain as I walked and ran the course, but as I thought of the wounded warriors that suffered so much and had lost limbs of their own, I realized I had no room to complain about my pain. It brought me strength. For every race I pin scriptures to my bib and since being injured I not only pin them to my bib but to the braces I wear on my knees. Those scriptures brought me strength as well. I was able to continue on and finish strong. It wasn't until I had returned home two days after having completed my first marathon that my doctor finally called with my MRI results telling me that I did in fact have a torn meniscus.

Recovery & Reflection... My injury has been hard on me. It's hard because I see where I started on October 20th and where I quickly went (up to February 8th) and now with my injury I feel I am back to where I started. My times are slower and I can't run as long or as far anymore. I try to keep a positive mind and always look on the bright side of things. I have been through a lot health wise. I not only suffer with asthma, but I have a severe lung disease, which not only affects my lungs, but other organs and joints throughout my body. I believe that we all go through things for a reason, even if we do not know what that reason is at the time. It may be to show ourselves something in our life or it may be to help someone else with something they are battling in their life. Whatever it may be, I take it all with a smile and press onward as best as I can with positivity. I am a runner! I may not be as fast right now as I once was, but that is okay. I may not run as far as I could a few months ago, but that is okay. I am not giving up nor will I ever. I am a runner and I love running!

A LIFE WELL LIVED

Andrea Rainey became Half Fanatic #8215 last year, after the Coeur d’Alene Half Marathon. Shortly after become an official fanatic she was diagnosed with Leukemia. Andrea was a fighter, but sadly lost her battle on Saturday April 4, 2014 at her home in Coeur d’Alene, Idaho surrounded by friends.

“We who choose to surround ourselves with lives even more temporary than our own, live within a fragile circle, easily and often breached. Unable to accept its awful gaps, we still would live no other way. We cherish memory as the only certain immortality, never fully understanding the plan.” —Irving Townsend

May she rest peacefully and run with angel’s wings.

FANATIC POLL

Each month there will be a “Fanatic poll”. This poll will be posted online. Please take a few moments to answer this poll. I will post the results in the next newsletter.

This month’s question:

What do you find most helpful for post-race recovery?

Please vote online between now and April 30th at: <http://survey.constantcontact.com/poll/a07eauuc82ui8gw4l0m/start.html>.

Last month’s question:
Do you follow a training plan?
